

Cypress String Quartet returns to Dominican

Known internationally and nationally for its elegant performances, the Cypress String Quartet featured Cecily Ward and Tom Stone on violin; Ethan Filner on viola; and cellist Jennifer Kloetzel. They were joined on stage at Dominican by guest cellist Jean-Michel Fonteneau of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music.

Founded in San Francisco in 1996, the Cypress String Quartet had not played in Angelico Hall in seven years. It has been praised by Gramophone for its “artistry of uncommon insight and cohesion,” and its sound has been called “beautifully proportioned and powerful” by The Washington Post. CSQ has performed at the Kennedy Center, Library of Congress, Krannert Center, Cal Performances, Stanford Lively Arts, Ravinia Festival and in the 92nd Street Y’s series at SubCulture, a new downtown music venue in New York City.

At Dominican, the Cypress String Quartet performed the works of Haydn (String Quartet in D Major, Op. 76, No. 5), Griffes (Two Sketches on Indian Themes) and Schubert (Quintet in C Major, Op. 163, D. 956).
